

Contents

Editorial Advisory Board 2002/2003	vii
About the contributors	x
Introduction	xiv
Part 1 In Praise of the Digital Revolution?	1
1 The spectrum of digital objects in the library and beyond Marilyn Deegan	3
2 Digital versus print issues Lorna Peterson	26
Part 2 Institutional Models and Finance	45
3 New models of the library in a digital era Peter Brophy	47
4 The economic opportunities and costs of developing digital libraries and resources Simon Tanner	68
Part 3 Books and 'Readers'	89
5 Reading in a digital age Catherine Sheldrick Ross	91
6 Judging a book by its cover: e-books, digitization and print on demand Shirley Hyatt	112
7 The digital library and younger users Denice Adkins	133

Part 4 Reference Services	157
8 Web-based reference services: design and implementation decisions Stephen M. Mutula	159
9 Web-based reference services: the user-intermediary interaction perspective Sherry Shiuan Su	185
10 Digital library initiatives for academic teaching and learning: towards a managed information environment for online learning Judith Clark	208
11 It's just a click away, or is it? The challenge of implementing a global information network Diane Kresh	236
Part 5 Collection Management	259
12 Evaluating digital collections Alastair G. Smith	261
13 Creating content together: an international perspective on digitization programmes David Dawson	282
Part 6 Standards and Technology	303
14 Making sense of metadata: reading the words on a spinning top Daniel G. Dorner	305
15 Beyond today's search engines Christopher Brown-Syed	340
16 Are we information providers or the information police? The uneasy marriage between access and security Shadrack Katuu	361
Index	379