

Contents

Introduction: the everyday internet	vii
1 The internet revolution	1
The importance of the world wide web 1; Who uses the internet? 4; Telling or selling? 6; Intranets and extranets 8; What is happening to the technology? 8; Summary 10; References 11
2 LIS professionals and the web	13
Why have LIS professionals become so important? 13; A natural role for LIS professionals 14; Too much opportunity? 17; More skills of the LIS professional 18; Summary 22; References 23
3 Getting on the web	25
Why have a website? 26; Who is your audience? 27; What is the purpose of your site? 29; Pitching the level right for your target customers 33; Resource issues: recruitment and training 35; The web and your business strategy 36; Using business analysis to keep your strategies aligned 37; Handling e-mail 37; Summary 38; References 38
4 The business case for creating a website	39
Making the business case 40; Reasons for creating a website 40; Publicizing the organization – the ‘shop window’ website 41; Doing business through e-commerce – the ‘market place’ website 50; Communicating with customers and other interested users of your site 53; Providing information 53; Other reasons to have a website 54; Selling the service to the organization 55;

Reporting back to the organization 56; Summary 57;
References 57

5 The webmaster and the web team 59

What is a webmaster? 59; Building the website team 63;
Freelance work on the web 65; Skills and qualifications of the webmaster 66; Holding on to your investment 67; Future prospects for webmasters 71; Training 71; Advertising for a webmaster 72; Summary 73; References 73

6 Populating and organizing your website 75

What makes a good library website? 75; Organizing your website 79; How to annoy people with your website 80;
The top ten features of library websites 84; References 87

7 Managing technical service provision 91

The 24-hour web and your library website 91; Using an ISP or doing it yourself 93; In-house or outsourced? 96; The increasing complexity of websites 98; Going outside your organization 99; What will you outsource? 99; Usability
102; Reaching an agreement with a supplier 103; Summary
108; References 108

8 Managing registration, publication, design and accessibility 111

Choosing and registering domain names 111; Some hazards of domain name registration 117; Authoring tools 123; Publishing a site in languages other than English 126
Making your site accessible to all your users 129; Designing for different browsers 131; Getting your site known inside and outside the organization 132; What are people looking at? 139; Summary 140; References 140

9 Managing website content 143

Setting out the content 144; Keeping your website up to date 144; Acceptable use policies 148; Some other issues 150; Writing for the web 152; Copyright and intellectual property 156; Links to other websites 158; Image thieves 162; Some other legal considerations 164; Using software
to manage content 165; Archiving your site 166;
Discussion groups and chat rooms 168; Weblogs 170; A cautionary tale 175; Summary 176; References 176

10 Your intranet	181
Why intranets? 181; The potential of intranets 182; The uses of intranets 183; Intranets and the library and information service 186; Intranet portals 187; The knowledge management intranet 188; Some other intranet facilities 191; Acceptable use policies for intranets 192; Managing your intranet 193; The business benefit of having an intranet 193; Application service providers 194; Extranets 195; Summary 196; References 196
11 Developing your website	197
Keeping your website up to date 197; Monitoring your site 200; Keeping up with change 201; New web technologies 203; Summary 204; References 204
12 Golden rules of web page content	207
The golden rules 207; References 212
13 Resource list	215
Further reading and references 215; Common terms and additional notes 225
Index	237